REPLACE the description and course requirements of Race/Gender/Ethnicity Minor found on pgs. 212-215 the 2017-2018 catalog with the following:

Race/Gender/Ethnicity Minor

Faculty Contact: Ursula McTaggart

People of color, women, and people in the Lesbian, Gay, Bi-sexual, Transgender and Questioning (LGBTQ) community have faced—and continue to face—oppression and inequality. This interdisciplinary minor explores the history and current experiences of women, LGBTQ people, and people of color in the United States and around the world. What obstacles have these groups faced, how have they attempted to overcome those obstacles, and what strategies do they have for building equality in the future? Students will become versed in philosophies of race and gender, including the notion that racial, ethnic, gender and sexual identities are primarily socially constructed rather than fixed or “natural.” This minor will enlighten students not only about the lived experiences of oppressed people but also about how the very concepts of gender, race, and sexual identity have changed over time. Students will gain a basic understanding of gender and race theories in ID134G. Two core courses, EN251 and an upper division topics course in history will offer varying topical examinations of people facing oppression in literature and culture. Subsequent courses will include topics across the disciplines allowing students to “double dip” within their major field of study when possible while also widening their perspectives about other cultures and disciplines.
