Senior Salute: Brooklyn Barger Plans to Pursue Doctor of Physical Therapy Degree at Kentucky

Submitted By: Brooklyn Barger '20
Springfield, OH

While senior Brooklyn Barger was busy in the biology labs and classes associated with her desire to pursue a Doctor of Physical Therapy degree at the University of Kentucky, she also found time to start a club.

Indeed, strikes and spares ended up being a valuable part of her Wilmington College experience. Brooklyn is a founding member of the WC Bowling Club. "Getting to experience how to successfully start a club is a favorite memory of my time at WC," she said. "Also, here I opened up as a person and became more confident."

Brooklyn, a biology major from Springfield, was involved with the STEM (Science Technology Engineering and Medicine) Society, which gave her the opportunity to see a proton accelerator. Also, she enjoyed her experience learning about other cultures as a participant in Model Arab League.

She encourages students to broaden their scope of interests by getting involved on campus. "Try many different things!" Brooklyn added. "WC offers a lot of activities through clubs and such."
